

Go Fish

You're not surprised to learn the penguins' favorite card game.
They especially love the fishing part.

Reflecting typical turn structure, players make some number of successful requests, and then draw a card from the stock once told to "Go Fish."

Round 1 In this round, each player made exactly one successful request.

Player 1 During this turn, I took a king from someone and then drew a face card of a suit and rank I did not have.

Player 2 I knew my request would yield at least two cards. I then drew an ace of a suit I did not have at the start of my turn.

Player 3 My request was to player 5. I then drew the same card as player 1, except mine was a suit I did not have.

Player 4 I gained two jacks this turn (one taken, one drawn).

Player 5 Two cards were taken from me before my turn started, but I still made the first book. I then drew a club card of a lower rank than my other cards.

Dealer I requested the same rank from player 3 that they requested from someone. I drew the heart version of the same card drawn by player 5.

Round 2 In this round, each player made exactly one successful request except for player 5, who was told to “Go Fish” immediately.

Player 1 Player 2 and I each made one book from cards we took this round. I then drew the three of spades.

Player 2 The dealer and I drew the same card this round – I got the heart version, they got the club.

Player 3 The card I got from my request was taken from me later in the round. I drew the two of diamonds.

Player 4 I have two triples after my request. I drew a club card ranked between the cards in my hand.

Player 5 I drew an ace and ended the round with only two cards, both the same suit.

Dealer I took a card from a player whose number matches the card’s rank. I then drew a seven of the same suit as the card I took.

Round 3 In this round, each player after player 2 made exactly one successful request.

Player 1 I successfully requested the highest rank I could from two players. The card I drew was taken from me later this round.

Player 2 Like player 1, I successfully requested the highest rank I could from two players, one of whom was player 1.

Player 3 I made the first book of this round, which was not of rank two. The card I drew was immediately taken by player 4.

Player 4 I made the second book of this round. I then drew the last face card.

Player 5 From player 2, I took two cards, which were taken from me later this round. I ended the round with only two cards of the same suit (again).

Dealer I drew the highest ranked card remaining in the stock, which was higher than seven.

Round 4 In this round, each player made at least one book, but no one made any books from their draw.

Player 1 I only took one card from someone this round. I ended my turn with a full house.

Player 2 I only took cards from player 1 this round.

Player 3 I only made one successful request this round.

Player 4 I drew the last card in the stock.

Player 5 I took three cards from player 2.

Dealer I took a five from player 3, among other cards from other players, ending the game.
